Quest Named to Indianapolis Star's Top Workplaces 2010 List

May 11, 2010 (INDIANAPOLIS, IN) — For the second consecutive year, Quest was named to the Indianapolis Star's Top Workplaces list. The honorees were selected by Workplace Dynamics of Exton, Pa. Quest earned recognition under the small business category. Workplace Dynamics surveyed 20,000 employees from over 100 companies, asking various questions about workplace satisfaction.

According to overall survey results for Indiana organizations, employees are looking for job security in today's economy. They also appreciate companies with strong values and ethics, stability, efficient operations and leaders who listen. Among several topics, Quest received its highest rankings in management. Employee confidence in managers, ease of being honest with managers and frequent praise from managers exceeded benchmarks of small companies in the same category. Quest also had one of the greatest percentages of employee responses to the survey for all organizations.

"I'm especially pleased to see comments indicating employees feel good about their managers," expressed Quest CEO Steve McNear. "We try to foster a culture where employees can share ideas and dialogue with management because we know that's the best way for employees and the company to learn and grow. I believe our monthly meetings in which we share where the company is, where we're going and how we arrive at decisions offers a sense of job security as well."

Quest offers special interest groups on different technologies and methodologies for employees to expand their knowledge base and skills and holds company-sponsored events to promote a fun atmosphere.
